

ADMINISTRATIVE FEE INFO - Long Stay Visa D

Most applicants have to pay an administrative fee to cover the processing costs of their application for a long stay visa D.

When submitting the visa application, you have to prove that you have indeed paid this fee. If you cannot prove this, the Embassy will dismiss your visa application.

You need to pay the exact amount of the administrative fee, meaning that your payment should consist of the administrative fee and any possible bank fees.

It does not matter who pays the administrative fee.

The payment can e.g. be done by a third party in Belgium (e.g. the person wanting to reunite the family, the employer, a guarantor). We suggest this in cases where the applicant can count on the support of the person residing in Belgium.

The exact amount needs to be deposited, in Euro, into bank account BE57 6792 0060 9235.

The person doing the transfer needs to mention the following in the "comment" box of the transfer:

- last and first name of the applicant,
- his nationality and
- his date of birth

The following structure is to be used: LastNameFirstNameNationalityDDMMYYYY.

When you submit your visa application, the evidence that you paid this administrative fee must contain evidence that you used the reference of your name, nationality and date of birth.
